PREFACE TO REVISED EDITION

THE late J. G. Anderson left an interleaved copy of Le Mot juste containing numerous additions and alterations.

The first object of this new edition of the book was to incorporate this new material. But it was felt that further improvements were possible. Accordingly, the reviser set before himself a number of guiding principles to which he has tried to adhere as strictly as possible in the work of revision. Those principles were:

(1) Accuracy must be attained before anything else; any errors must be tracked down and expelled. To ensure this, constant reference must be made, on the one hand, to the Oxford English Dictionary and Webster's New International Dictionary, and, on the other, to Littré, Hatzfeld and Darmesteter, the Dictionnaire de l'Académie, and the Larousse du XX^e siècle.

(2) The book must be a dictionary of French and English words that, through resemblance in spelling or pronunciation, are likely to be confused: it must not attempt to be, en passant, a dictionary of synonyms (for which a separate and much larger work amply illustrated by examples would be required); nor must it contain articles on the translation of adverbs, prepositions, etc., or other matter really of a grammatical nature and therefore extraneous to the real purpose.

(3) The new edition must be practical; anything savouring of the obsolete must be mercilessly jettisoned.

(4) Nothing in the nature of duplication must be tolerated. If an English word can be translated by its French counterpart in practically all cases, it must not be glossed at all.

(5) Definitions and explanations must be absolutely clear.

(6) Where the mere giving of the French or English equivalent of a word does not seem an adequate guide to its use, illustrative examples taken from modern authors or from one or other of the dictionaries mentioned in (1) should be cited and, if necessary, translated.

The putting into practice of the first four of these principles has resulted in a considerable amount of excision. Thus, the article on Abhorrent has been rejected under (1) and (3): the example quoted in it, 'the persons the most abhorrent from rebellion and treason' (which occurs in Les Faux Amis of Kœssler and Derocquigny, Paris, Vuibert, 1928, in the form 'the persons most abhorrent from treason and arbitrary confiscation,' and which is ultimately to be traced to Burke, quoted in the Oxford Dictionary as follows: 'the persons most abhorrent from blood, and treason, and arbitrary confiscation'), is not modern English; anyhow, there is no modern French word 'abhorrent.' Similarly, the example 'in the article of falling,' sub Article, has been cut out under (3). Or again, sub Confound, '(bibl. put to shame) faire honte à' has been removed under (1), since the French for confounded, for instance, in Psalm xxii, verse 5, is confondus (Ostervald version) or confus (R.C. version, A. Crampon's translation). Or again, the article on Coward, with its 'Un lâche abandonne son poste. Un poltron (couard) tremble quand face à face avec le danger,' has been jettisoned under (1) and (2), Lafaye's Dictionnaire des Synonymes de la langue française (page 717) giving 'Le lâche ne se bat point; le poltron se sauve.' Or yet again, 's'assimiler,' in the article on Digest, has been cut out under (4), since the French digérer has precisely this meaning.

It has not, alas! been possible to put into practice principle number (6) to the extent that the reviser had hoped. To have done so would have involved, firstly, an increase in the size of the book, and secondly, considerable delay in its re-issue; suitable examples do not grow on raspberry bushes and the finding of them entails an enormous amount of reading, whilst much work which, though merely of a routine character, none the less takes time, is required to classify them in a card-index ready for use when needed. Some examples, however, which had already been collected before revision was undertaken have been used in illustration of certain words, and will, it is hoped, be found useful.

Principle number (5) has been strictly adhered to. This explains why, for example, the article on Congregation has been slightly altered. The reviser felt that '(religion) congrégation, (réunion des fidèles, paroissiens ' was by no means an adequate explanation. Surely, a congregation in a church could be classed as '(religion)'; yet congrégation cannot be used to translate it. The new article, therefore, removes any ambiguity by appearing as follows: '(religious community) congrégation; (body assembled for religious worship) (réunion des) fidèles, paroissiens.'

The reviser wishes to express his gratitude to Mr Charles Lee, who has not only read the proofs but made the most valuable suggestions and criticisms.

EXPLANATORY OF PUNCTUATION, TYPE, ETC.

ENGLISH and French head-words are in roman and italic respectively, and the alphabetical order is that of the English head-words. French equivalents of English head-words are in italic type, while English equivalents of French head-words are in roman. French examples are usually in italics, unless there is some special reason, such as convenience.

Special attention is drawn to certain equivalents by printing in heavy type (roman or italic), and these equivalents are mainly those which show the differences between two words that are put side by side.

Distinct senses are separated by semicolons; a comma indicates practical synonymy.

To economize space a + is often used to indicate a meaning that the corresponding word does not possess.

An asterisk preceding a word indicates that the word is archaic. An asterisk following indicates that the head-word is archaic in that particular sense.

Académie = academic (also with special ref. to the 'Académie française': Fauteuil, discours, a.) + (of style, literary works, paintings) over-elegant, in which the artistry is too obvious: Pourquoi appelle-t-on a. un discours fleuri, élégant, ingénieux, harmonieux, et non un discours vrai et fort, lumineux et simple? (Vauvenargues, quoted by Littré).

Accede=accéder (=assent to, agree to: a. to a proposal, a request=accéder à une proposition, à une demande) + monter sur le trône (=a. to the throne).

Accéder=accède, assent to + (i) adhere to: Les puissances du Nord ont accédé à ce traité, à cette convention (Dict. de l'Acad.); (ii) reach, have access to: on accédait à cette terrasse par vingt marches (Dict. de l'Acad.). Sur cette sorte de plateau moral auquel il avait accédé, l'ambition lui était venue de pouvoir enfin dominer les petites vies environnantes (E. Jaloux, La Fin d'un beau jour).

Accent (v.)=accentuer.

Accentuer=accent + (i) accentuate (chiefly fig. = mark strongly, emphasize): il a les traits fortement accentués=he has strongly accentuated, strongly marked features [cf. Accuser (iii)]; (ii) (abs.) articulate: cet acteur accentue parfaitement (Dict. de l'Acad.).

Accent=accent + (paint.) high light or deep shadow: mettre des aa. (Darmesteter and Hatzfeld).

Acceptable=acceptable + agréable, (qui est le bienvenu): your letters are always a.=vos lettres sont toujours les bienvenues.

Acceptation is archaic or obsolete except in the sense 'the sense in which a word or sentence is accepted or received; the received meaning' (N.E.D.), which=acception: in its widest acception, the word means . . . =dans son acception la plus étendue le mot signifie.

Acceptation=acceptance: la signature de notre accord, signature qui pourrait avoir lieu sous dix jours, à compter de votre a. verbale (G. Duhamel, Le Notaire du Havre).

Accès=access+attack (physical), fit or paroxysm (physical and moral), outburst (moral): a. de fièvre, de goutte=attack of fever, of gout. A. de toux=Paroxysm, fit of coughing. A. de folie=Fit of madness. A. de colère=Fit of temper, outburst of passion. A. de désespoir=Fit of despair. A. d'enthousiasme=Fit, outburst, of enthusiasm. A. de rire=Fit, paroxysm, of laughter. Il a des a. de libéralité (Littré)=He has fits of generosity. ['Access' would be possible in all the above cases but is rather literary in style: cf. In an access of pity and pain Aunt Carrie buried her shaking head in her shaking hands and sobbed bitterly (A. J. Cronin, The Stars look down). These astonishing accesses of emotion (Virginia Woolf, Mrs Dalloway). In an access of despair (Somerset Maugham, Of Human Bondage). Par a.=By fits and starts.

Accession=accession + (increase) accroissement, (thing added) acquisition, addition.

Accessory=(adj. and n.) accessoire + (n., of persons) complice: a. after the fact, before the fact=complice par assistance, par instigation.

Accessoire=accessory + (i) (adj.) minor, subordinate: jouer un rôle a.; (ii) (n.pl.) minor parts: acteur qui joue les aa. (Larousse); (iii) (n.pl.) (theat.) properties: le garçon de théâtre a oublié d'apporter les aa. (Dict. de l'Acad.).

Accidence=(i) (gram.) morphologie; (ii) rudiments, éléments: the poets who were just then learning the a. of their art (Lowell, cited by the N.E.D.)=les poètes qui, à cette époque, en étaient encore au rudiment.

Accidence=accidentalism.

Accident=accident + (i) (mus., paint.) accidental; (ii) (med.) complication: sur un fond d'intoxication chronique . . . viennent souvent se greffer des aa. aigus (Le Temps, 26 Feb. 1937); (iii) unevenness, undulation, irregularity (de terrain, of ground) [English 'accident' is possible here, but rare].

Accolade=accolade [(i) mus.; (ii) salutation marking the bestowal of knight-hood] + (i) embrace, hug, kiss: une a. fraternelle [by extens., fig.: donnant à l'ordre de si rudes aa. que nous l'eûmes bientôt vidée (Lesage, cited by Darmesteter and Hatzfeld)=applying ourselves so heartily to the bottle that we had soon emptied it]; (ii) (cook.) brace (of fowls, etc., served up together): une a. de lapereaux (Larousse); (iii) (print.) brace.

Accommodate = accommoder + (i) loger, caser, contenir: a. a friend for the night = loger un ami pour la nuit. The cell . . . having recently accommodated a drunken deserter, was by no means clean (Dickens, cited by the N.E.D.) = La cellule, ayant récemment servi de logement à un déserteur ivre, n'était pas du tout propre. This hall can a. two hundred people = Cette salle peut contenir deux cents personnes. A ministry in which all His Majesty's friends were comfortably accommodated = Un ministère où tous les amis de Sa Majesté étaient confortablement casés (Macaulay, cited in Guiraud). A workshop . . . spacious enough to a. a double railway line with a platform (G. B. Shaw, The Apple Cart) = Un atelier assez spacieux pour contenir une double voie de chemin de fer y compris un quai; (ii) rendre service, obliger: I was willing to a. you by undertaking to sell the horse (G. Eliot, cited by the N.E.D.) = J'étais disposé à vous rendre service en me chargeant de vendre le cheval. Could you a. me with a loan of ten pounds? = Pourriez-vous m'obliger en me prêtant dix livres? Can you a. me with cash for a cheque? (N.E.D.) = Pouvez-vous m'obliger en me donnant de l'argent contre un chèque? 'Won't you be seated?' 'Certainly! Anything to a.!' (Gunter, cited by the N.E.D.) = Vous ne voulez pas vous asseoir? — Comment donc! Tout ce que vous voudrez pour vous rendre service. Accommodating husband = Mari débonnaire.

Accommoder = accommodate + (i) suit: cette maison m'accommode (Larousse) = this house suits me, serves my turn. De manière à a. tout le monde (Littre) = So as to suit everybody; (ii) (cook.) cook, dress, season, do up, prepare: a. des champignons, de la viande, du poisson, des légumes. Marguerite croit bien faire en ajoutant un filet de vinaigre au foie de porc sauté. Je n'aime pas le foie de porc et cette façon de l'a. me le rend indigeste (G. Duhamel, Journal de Salavin) = . . . this way of cooking it makes it indigestible for me. Les asperges s'accommodent à l'huile et au vinaigre ou à la sauce blanche (Larousse) = Asparagus can be served up with oil and vinegar or with white sauce. Il n'acheta que des langues, lesquelles il fit

a. à toutes les sauces (La Fontaine, cited by Darmesteter and Hatzfeld) = All he bought was tongues and these he did (dished, served) up with every kind of sauce (in every kind of way). (Fig.) A. qqn à toutes sauces, de toutes pièces = Vilify, slander, abuse s.o. [cf. Accoutter (ii)]. (Fig. and fam.) A. un même sujet à toutes les sauces = Dish up the same subject in every shape (Mansion); (iii) (iron. and fam.) dress s.o. down, give s.o. a thrashing or a slating, ill-treat: Je l'accorderai comme il faut (Littre) = I'll give him a proper dressing down, I'll give it to him, I'll give him his deserts. Elle m'accablait d'injures bizarres et comme elle avait, de son sexe, une opinion non médiocre, elle m'accablait au féminin . . . Péronnelle! Petite bécasse, criait-elle (G. Force. Force. Broadly speaking and neglecting the loose use of the word by English writers, the main difference between the two languages here is that the English word is applied to f. that effects something, that is acting, producing change, whereas the French word connotes also the abstract quality, latent power or energy. Hence La f. will often be rendered by strength, power, energy, as well as by f. We say 'strength of character,' but 'f. of example.' The French use f. in both cases. We say (or should say) 'the strength of the wind' when speaking abstractly, but 'the f. of the wind uprooted a tree.' Ff. may mean strength or (mil.) ff.

Snobbery. Snobisme. [Larousse defines the latter as 'Admiration factice et sottise pour tout ce qui est en vogue'; the Dict. de l'Acad. as 'Vanité de ceux qui affectent les opinions, les manières d'être et de sentir qui ont cours dans certains milieux tenus pour distingués.' The N.E.D. definition of 'snob' is 'one who meanly or vulgarly admires and seeks to imitate, or associate with, those of superior rank or wealth; one who wishes to be regarded as a person of social importance'; that of the Concise Oxford Dict. is 'person with exaggerated respect for social position or wealth and a disposition to be ashamed of socially inferior connexions, behave with servility to social superiors, and judge of merit by externals.' If Larousse is right, then snob = vulgar follower of fashion, and 'snob' = admirateur et imitateur servile des personnes riches ou de haut rang.

Guiraud's Dict. anglais-français has the following entry: 'Dans son acception la plus fréquente "snob" est intraduisible et à peu près indéfinissable. Celui qui rampe devant ses supérieurs et traite ses inférieurs avec insolence est un "snob"; celui qui est fier de son nom, de ses relations, de sa fortune, etc., est un "snob"; celui qui affecte les manières d'une classe sociale qui n'est pas la sienne est un "snob." Le parvenu se conduit souvent en "snob." Voy. l'ouvrage de Thackeray: The Book of Snobs. En France snob se dit surtout de quiconque affecte d'admirer une forme d'art, sans réellement la goûter, uniquement parce qu'elle est à la mode. Ce n'est qu'une des nombreuses nuances du mot anglais.'
